Woman's Good Citizens.

One of the leading papers at the recent annual congress of the Woman's Council of Mississippi, Miss., read by Dr. G. S. Smith, Esq., on "Woman as Good Citizens." Dr. Smith said, in part:

Many women are good citizens. But some women are very selfish citizens. Let us consider what constitutes allegiance, or unselfish citizenship. Allegiance is loyalty, alertness to defend the State from danger, to seek its highest good, to further its progress and to increase its prosperity. In times of war women do their part. In times of peace they stand ready to take up the work the men have left. They go themselves as nurses. They give the dearest beloved to fight and die for the country's honor. Sweet Lucy Stone said: "A woman risks her life every time a soldier is born." It must be said they do a full equivalent for fighting, and some even fight, as the Cuban women are doing to day.

In times of peace, good citizenship secures the interests of our country in two ways: First, by legislation, second, by executive action, that is, the words: "I do," "I will," "I am," "I am not," must be carried into effect. In Wyoming, where women vote, men of questionable character cannot be elected. Men who are loyal to the party and have other qualifications which satisfy the men in their constituency, fail of election because the women demand good habits and good character for the leaders of their boys. One woman quietly puts on her sunbonnet and talks over the fence with her neighbor, who wears her sunbonnet and talks over the fence and confers with the next woman's suitor.

There is no fuss, no mass meeting; but when the returns are in the mail of doubtful character find themselves out of "the uncolored," and because of the sterling sunbonnet brigade. In Wyoming, you see, the women have gotten at the root of the matter.

The ballot-box is the battle ground where in times of peace all government issues are decided. Here the woman warriors can fight shoulder to shoulder with the men, with ballots instead of bayonets.

Mr. George W. Smalley, late the London correspondent of the New York Sun, now the New York correspondent of the London Times, lived a long time in London and has spent the last year in New York, and says that, so far as his experience of it goes, the New York postal is immeasurably inferior to that of London. "Immeasurably!" is a strong word, but Mr. Smalley uses it advisedly and sticks to it. He lives at Seventy-fifth street, between Madison and Fifth avenue. He says that he is at his room in the morning is delivered at his house sometime between eight o'clock and ten, the time of the delivery being various and uncertain, and that ordinarily he gets his letters about nine o'clock. Four other deliveries reach his house, the last one being at ten, eleven, and twelve, and the last at six and eight o'clock." In London, living nearly as far from the business centre as he does in New York, Mr. Smalley got his first letters daily ten minutes before eight, and after that, from ten in the morning until ten at night, the deliveries were hourly. In London, he says, it takes about two hours to collect a letter and deliver it within the postal area, so that it is a common thing for a Londoner to get a letter and get an answer to it by post within three or four hours. "Is that the best thing like it true, of New York?" he asks sadly, and though he pauses, it is not for a reply.

Uncle Sam's post office is a big concern that does many things very well, and carries a great many letters safely to their destinations, but we are pretty safe in taking Mr. Smalley's word for it that it does not serve the city of New York as well as it should, or nearly as well as the British post office serves London. Mr. Smalley knows what a civilized being resident in a good quarter of a great city has a right to expect from his post office, and he does a service in making his expectations public. The post office department ought to make much more money than it does, and ought to have much more to spend in giving better services to the great cities out of which it gets its greatest profits.—[Harper's Weekly.

 greetings were over the young woman with the fur tippet said to her companion:
 "Oh, Alice, how glad I am to meet
 this morning, for I am just dying to get about the wedding. Do tell me what it is. I suppose Grace looked too lovely for anything, the dear girl?"
 "Oh, yes, never felt so nervous in a moment and after three separate rehearsals,
 I could Grace appear much flustered?"
 "A maid of honor, of course, I was to be to the front, and when we entered the church I could feel every eye turned toward me. You know how I will stare at a wedding."
 "Tell me about Grace's gown; I understand it was imported, and just too
 lovely for anything."
 "Why, we drove over, you know, and thought she would never be ready.
 I never saw such a slow poke. Why,
 even wanted me to fix up her veil,
 if I didn't have all I could attend to looking after my own toilet."
 "I wish I could have seen her. When promised to leave, cherish and obey didn't her voice tremble a little?"
 "Why, do you know, I had to stand throughout the entire service. I saw positively the most trying ordeal ever passed through, and I tell you it was not that of nerve."
 "I wish there have been a swell wedding,
 anyway."
 "It was, indeed."
 "Well, here's my corner. A wifal glad I have met you. I wanted so much to hear about the wedding. Good by,
 my dear."

CONSULTING THE CLOCK

Familiar Faces That Are Seldom Looked by New Yorkers.

One of the popular habits of the people of New York city is to consult a clock almost on every occasion when opportunity is presented. It matters not whether any special need requires that consultation or not, the clock is thus consulted. Especially is this the case if a particular clock has the reputation of being a good timekeeper. It is well known by many storekeepers that they will place clocks in stores so situated as to be easily accessible to persons who may be passing along the adjacent sidewalk. If the clock is placed in a good location, it will attract good reputation, and the pedestrian will be fortunate enough to carry a watch with him. A comparison is almost sure to be made.

Many times a clock with a good location placed in the back part of a store becomes a protection thereof, especially at night, if near it is located a strong enough illuminant to illuminate its face and show the time. A policeman told me that the other day that a good location for a clock is better than a good watchman for a jewelry store, as a belated passerby is likely to look at the clock and see what time it is, and would be almost certain to notice something unusual in the appearance of the store. It therefore becomes judicious silent watchman guarding the pass against the depredations of burglars makes the pedestrians, as it were, assistants in the work.

Church clocks have always a large number of patrons in the community, and nothing seems so annoying us to find such a clock-tive. When an event of this kind occurs, especially if the church is on or near a busy thoroughfare, the fact of the clock being stopped, or some defect appears to exist, it made the subject of a notice in the papers. Especially was this the case when the steeple of old St. Paul's recently undergoing renovation was a joy to many on noticing newly gilded hands of the clock again traveling along their accustomed circuit and the deep toned bell ready to strike the hour once more. Question of Adultery.

A criminal lawyer of long experience at the bar was heard to say the day:

"I have made juries in murder an especial study. There are a number of men, larger than most people suppose, who have surmises fluting death as a punishment need to make it un-murderer. The necessity to study jurymen's faces and I could read by the lines whether they had scruples about the death sentence. I gave this up, though, as beyond my power of comprehension. Later continued study of the faces led me to a discovery. That was to find nine cases out of ten a jury composed mostly of tall, lean men would find the evidence was sufficient, notwithstanding the slightest hesitation about five or six terms. On the other hand, a jury where short, fat men predominated in number would occupy twice as much time in finding its verdict, and would bring in it would generally be for imprisonment for the murder. My plea is the responsibility of citizenship, the duty of suffrage. It is not alone that by our ballots we women can do good work. More than that. It is our duty to do this work. The whole duty is cowardly. It is unwomanly voice. It is unwomanly. It is unwomanly vote. It is unwomanly. It is unwomanly to not want to be unwomanly.

It is unwomanly to care who shall live
after our children's education? No.
Then let us vote on school questions.
It is unwomanly to want our city beautiful with parks, our streets clean of filth, our streets free from the contagion of disease.

Is it unwomanly to demand that we should keepers, and to demand that we should properly care for the sick, our city sewers, and our capitol one? Is it unwomanly to want the fallen women cared for in the jails and lock-ups by matrons instead of men? No, no; all these are our manly woman's. Then let us be municipal suffrage.

Is it unwomanly to demand that we should have physicians in charge of insane women in State institutions, if it is unwomanly to demand a matron for women in our State penitentiary? Is it womanly to see that our youth are kept from temptation by a law forbidding the sale of intoxicants and tobacco to minors? Is it unwomanly to demand that we should have a law raising the age of conscription to eighteen, and punishing the offenders by the severest penalty instead of a nominal one? Is it unwomanly to

mand trial by a jury of our peers suits involving questions of marriage, divorce, assault, and all those interesting women and a woman's interests should we leave the decision to a jury of men alone? No; at least the jury should be women. All these decisions are ours as mothers. Then let us and obtain State suffrage, and let us use for all these womanly ways
being good citizens.

Hurray for Idaho!

The Supreme Court of Idaho has held that the woman suffrage argument is carried to the jury decision. It has been clearly unjust, the vote in favor of the woman nearly two to one. The Political ity Clubs can now take out the
which they had prepared to sew them out for Idaho. We have our adventure he had with a bass-cashier. He was in an American café and wished to have a check cashed. But as the cashier did not know Signor Arditù, he told him he must go and himself in hotbed before he could recall the name.

"But I do not know any one here," protested the musical conductor.

"I am very sorry," said the cashier. "Signor Arditù thought for a few moments, and presently said,

"Do you ever attend the opera, you ma'?"

"Frequently," said the cashier. "I visit a good deal of asin."

"Then you must know me," continued Signor Arditù; and taking off his hat he turned his back upon the cashier, and beat time vigorously to an imaginary orchestra.

"On yes!" exclaimed the cashier, however. "I know the back of your head well. You are Signor Arditù."

He handed over the money to the musician without further ceremony.—Hagar's Round Table.

Oil Fuel for Gunboats.

The German naval authorities decided to partially heat the boiler of their men-of-war with oil. The new fuel is called "anassut." It is strictly oil, a product of the distillation of naphtha, and is dark brown in color. The tanks will be constructed for each vessel and from these tanks the fuel will be led to the furnaces, and there will be conducted thereto through pipes.

From the pipes it will be ejected in a spray, and the resulting steam is very bright and absolutely smokeless. So far as its heating power is concerned, it is declared to be superior to coal. Another advantage which has served to recommend its cheapness. The duties of the sailors are also greatly lightened by its use.

The time saved in getting up steam is another consideration that is of great weight, for the effect of the fuel is instantaneous, and the highest pressure can be obtained almost immediately.

Throwing Money Away

Is the same thing as spending it unwisely. If you only knew it, any clothing store in town could deceive you as to the value of the suit or overcoat that you might buy.

In dealing with us your protection lies in the fact that we couldn't afford to deceive you if we wanted to. Our good name is a guarantee against such a thing. Do you suppose we have devoted fifteen years to building up a trade and reputation just to jeopardize it by unworthy dealings now? Not much!

And, therefore, we are willing to stake our reputation upon the quality of our goods. We can't make a mistake, because you may have your money back merely by asking for it.

LITTLE COMPTON.

At the usual monthly meeting of the Court of Probate and Town Council the business transactions were: Notice ordered on petition of Ira W. Willard administrator on the estate of Mary S. Gray for leave to sell real estate.

The petition of Albert Gray executor of the will of Mary S. Gray, to remain sole executor, was referred to next meeting with order of notice.

Notice ordered on final account of F. R. Brownell, administrator with will annexed on the estate of George Pearce. First and final account of Abraham Manchester, administrator on the estate of Dennis Hunt allowed and discharged, records and papers destroyed.

Petition granted to F. R. Brownell for leave to record his disclaimer as guardian of William R. Manchester.

F. R. Brownell, administrator on the estate of Otis Hunt, presented his inventory and petitioned for leave to set aside an amount equal to expenses incurred, on which notice was ordered. Will of James Pearce was probated.

Mrs. S. A. Moscomb was named for administratrix by the will. Mrs. H. R. Edridge of Boston, granddaughter of Mr. Pearce, gave notice of contest several witnesses. The hearing was then adjourned to the first Monday in January 1897 to give defendant Mrs. Moscomb an chance to obtain counsel.

Walter Bixby was appointed to take the school census.

Four surveyors were appointed, John F. Pearce, S. E. district; George J. Smith, N. E. district; Reuben Pearce, N. W. district in place of Thomas Briggs, resigned.

It was voted to allow each surveyor a sum not to exceed $10 for necessary repairs, the appropriation for highways being already expended.

Rev. Mr. Russell of Hope Valley will preach at the Second Baptist church on Sunday.
